DISPUTATIONS -There is a class of people in this world, to whom much is due for keeping the faculties of the rest of the world in exercise, and thereby imparting to them health, strength, and readiness for usefulness. We mean the disputers and gain-sayers. They are usually ambitious, and talk for victory. Each assertion is followed by an earnest scratiny of of the by-atanders for a demonstration of applause or approbation, and usually the initiative is thrown in. These people always deal in contradictions. They will contradict your first word, without waiting to get the scope of your meaning. They appear to think that nothing is doing unless an argument is going on. Though they are not always of the most amiable turn of mind, they nevertheless subserve their end, and do much, sometimes, to brighten the faculties of the more amiable, intelligent and peaceful.
